IBM Rational & RTTS co-host free Webinar Series

New York, August 3, 2009 – RTTS (www.rtts.com), a leader in providing software quality for critical business applications and longtime IBM Rational Premier Business Partner, announced a joint effort to introduce and educate the software testing field on implementing IBM Rational's various testing tools on their new JAZZ platform.

The new webinar series, called "Lunch & Learn Wednesdays", will consist of five lunch hour sessions starting August 5th with the last session on September 9th. Each session is built around a specific tool such as Rational Quality Manager and Rational Functional Tester among others.

In addition to this complimentary webinar series, RTTS also offers a full breadth of courses for IBM Rational products in the areas of software development, requirements & test management, functional testing, performance testing and application security. As with all training courses RTTS provides for software professionals year round, the IBM Rational courses are taught by expert professionals with real-world field experiences in various verticals.
